CONCLUSION

As expressed within the multitude of incidents taking place in Bangladesh, the religious minorities, especially the Hindus and their communities, have been the target of widespread violence, threats, and intimidation after the resignation of Sheikh Hasina from the Prime Minister position in Bangladesh. Communities and people are living in fear, as the vast amount of attacks have occurred within a short period of time and have subjected hundreds of people from the minorities to human rights abuses.

Violations to the human rights of the religious minorities are far reaching and encompass a multitude of rights.

01

Human rights violated as guaranteed under the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR).

- Right to life and security - Article 3. People have been attacked, their lives have been threatened as a way to force people to flee their homes, and some have been beaten to death.
- Right to be free from arbitrary interference with a person's privacy, family and home - Article 12. People's homes have been attacked, vandalised and set on fire. The use of female family members by perpetrators to extort money upon the threat of sexual assault or death. Perpetrators have looted money, belongings, and valuables from people's homes.
- Right to own property and right not to be arbitrarily deprived of such property - Article 17. Perpetrators have attacked, vandalised, occupied forcefully, set fire to and burned to ashes the business establishments and other property, such as residences and motorcycles. Additionally, goods and valuables have been looted from shops as well as cows have been stolen and haystacks have been set on fire.
- The right to freedom of religion - Article 18. The religious minorities' places of worship have been set on fire, idols have been stolen and vandalised as well as statues have been damaged. Additionally, family temples' have been burned to the ground.

Accordingly, the attacks are causing vast livelihood insecurity for the religious minorities as their source of income is destroyed. Furthermore, people are deprived of their homes, forcing many to flee from their villages and seeking safety in other places. Such consequences are alarming on the minority communities, as they are already living in repressed circumstances due to belonging to minorities within Bangladesh. The international community is urging for the attacks to be halted and provide assistance and aid to the people affected by the surge of violence, attacks and vandalism.
